

Graham Emmons

VICE PRESIDENT, MANAGING DIRECTOR CIVIL UK

Graham Emmons oversees the Civil division of Leidos UK. The 600-people strong division provides a broad range of services and solutions to public sector organisations as well as the oil and gas and transport sectors across the UK and Europe.

Graham brings over 30 years' experience working on complex technology programs in a range of leadership roles in both the Civil and Defence sectors and has over 20 years of service with the company.

He has a proven track record of both winning and delivering large scale technology programs. During his service with the company, he has performed in both Capture Manager and Program Manager roles successfully both winning and delivering in excess of $500M of new business.

In addition to managing director of Civil UK, Graham's most prominent roles include: Capture Executive for the recent Met Police Command & Control Procurement, Capture Executive for the 2021 Census, Programme Director for NATO ANWI, Capture Director for procurement and Programme Director for delivery of MoJ FITS, Capture Manager for procurement and Programme Director for delivery of 2011 Census and Programme Manager for Defence Fixed Telecommunications Service.

Graham was the recipient of two prestigious Lockheed Corporate NOVA Awards, a UK Chief Executive's Award for Outstanding Achievement and numerous other awards for successful captures and program delivery assignments.

He prides himself on true collaborative working and his ability to build strong, enduring relationships with his customers and suppliers. Graham has extremely high levels of motivation and dedication and has a proven track record for making whatever commitment is necessary to ensure success.
